It has been in operation for 28 years, a locally established resort located just outside the city of Kuala Lumpur, has the enviable position of being situated on a site of 160 hectares nestled within a lush tropical forest, with manicured gardens and adjacent to a world-class golf course. A comprehensive two year refurbishment programme was undertaken by the resort which began in phases starting July of 2013 and completed in May this year, has instilled new life into the Saujana brand through its redesigned elements, that reflect the needs of the present-day travellers, stated in a news release from the resort.

“After months of planning, construction and investment, we are thrilled to officially unveil our brand new-look to the general public. This major investment will maintain the Saujana Hotel Kuala Lumpur position as a leading hotel in the Klang Valley”, said Peter Hourigan, the vice president of operations.

The refurbishment has also seen all of the hotel's 75 superior rooms restyled and 175 deluxe rooms renovated. This brings a total room inventory of 250 rooms from the previous 210 rooms.

Meanwhile, changes and upgrades are made to the resort's newly redesigned website, with a layout of its corporate site integrated with three hotel micro-sites and other business portfolios. The site is based on the responsive design layout technology, with the user's screen resolution optimised for desktop, tablet or mobile.

Peter Hourigan, the vice president of operations, played a key role in managing the new look of the resort.
